

What If?

What if there really is a me inside?
A self who is all me—and mine?
A unique set of quirks and qualities
To claim and develop?
To live from and through—and be?
What if I already have the right
And enough room
To be who I am?
What if I'm already here,
Capable of living my own life?
What if I'm actually meant to be
This me I already am—
My piece of the universal puzzle?
What if it's truly okay
To dance, to dance in daffodils,
Fully expressing all that is?
And all that oozes through my soul?
What if I refuse to miss
The possibilities of my own truth?
